

127. —que . . . —que is the same as et . . . et.

Note the contrast between the two words and remember laetus. Get Ovid's point?

128. The relative clause is the direct object of odit.

130. ab auro – it is almost as if the gold is personified.

131. Why are his brachia called splendida? Perhaps the coverings have turned into gold or there is a twinkle, not in his eyes, but on his body.

133. Miserere – What form is this?

Consider da and eripe. How can you make it fit in? If you haven't checked out deponent verbs recently, do so now. It's imperative that you do so.

134. Note mite is neuter with numen. Note fatentem modifies an understood illum (Midas) which takes an indirect statement of pecca(vi)sse, with the acc. subject omitted.

135. pacti – the same as polliciti in 107. Note the abl. abs. with fide data. Note that solvit has a base meaning and that is what you need to remember here and in 104; if you compare the two sentences, they seem to demand opposite meanings of solvo, but that good dictionary recommended back then should clear it all up for you.

136. Ne – negative purpose. Note that male goes with optato, a participle modifying auro.

137. Look at the word order in this line.

138. per iugum tells you that this was a mountain river and Midas is supposed to go upstream to the source. What C+R do you choose for undis? It's obvious, I hope.

139. ortus – another 4th declension noun. Ask about them.

140. tuum modifies caput in the next line. plurimus modifies an understood amnis, because Midas is to stick his head and body right in the middle of the river's source.

142. vis is an usual word. Check the definitions and note in its declension that we have no genitive or dative singulars that appear in classical Latin. Note the stem change in the plural.

vis vires

— virium

— viribus

vim vires (viris)

vi viribus

144. Note the abl. abs. surrounded by the genitives that qualify semine.

145. Note the word arrangement in this line and the number of words that we have seen previously.

Attonitus novitate mali divesque miserque effugere optat opes et quae modo voverat, odit. Copia nulla famem relevat; sitis arida guttur urit, et inviso meritus torquetur ab auro ad caelumque manus et splendida bracchia tollens "Da veniam, Lenaee pater! Peccavimus" inquit, "sed miserere, precor, speciosoque eripe damno!" Mite deum numen: Bacchus peccasse fatentem restituit pactique fide data munera solvit; "Ne" ve "male optato maneas circumlitus auro, vade" ait "ad magnis vicinum Sardibus amnem perque iugum nitens labentibus obvius undis carpe viam, donec venias ad fluminis ortus, spumigeroque tuum fonti, qua plurimus exit, subde caput corpusque simul, simul elue crimen." Rex iussae succedit aquae: vis aurea tinxit flumen et humano de corpore cessit in amnem; nunc quoque iam veteris percepto semine venae arva rigent auro madidis pallentia glaebis.	130 135 140 145
